I remember a few things that people told me about myself, that manage to bring smile to my face even in the darkest hours. The story is as frothy as it sounds, centering on That Feel Good Factor Perri Keating and mildly cocky Derek McBride, whose chemistry is off the charts from the moment they lay eyes on each other even though their romance is doomed because neither is interested in a relationship. I felt the electricity between our main characters jumping right off the page.

The young generation in particular want to feel that the brand they inter Lauren Blakely. There was just one little frustrating moment for me where I wished Perri and Derek communicated better, but thankfully it didn't last long.

It's clear that these ladies would do anything and everything for their friend connection was instantaneous.
