While other places in Jamaica also have cockpit karst topography, the region known as the Cockpit Country has the most Geomorphological Landscapes of the World and extensive cockpit karst development on the island. A dramatic example of tropical karst topography, the terrain and its constituent landforms are the products of the unique properties of the limestones in which they form, climatic influences, and the tectonic setting of the karst region. The book describes the various types of granite formations, including those with names such as, inselberg, spitkoppe, tor, dome, tafoni, and bornhardt.
